Who We Are

Summerglen facilitators Andrew Munger and Christina Thompson are both classically-trained musicians with extensive backgrounds in drumming and music education. Andrew graduated from the Atlanta Institute of Music in 1994, and has been leading community drum circles with groups of various ages and backgrounds ever since. Christina holds Bachelor's and Master's degrees in Music Education, and has been teaching music in academic, business, and recreational settings since 2002. Both Andrew and Christina are committed to providing your organization with a memorable, enlightening, and accessible musical experience.

Benefits of Drum Circles

Drum circles strengthen your organization's most important asset--your people! By providing a refreshing hands-on learning experience, drum circles spark participants' creativity and enable them to understand key workplace concepts in meaningful ways. By activating our basic human tendencies toward rhythm, drumming encourages focused attention, active listening, and creative, in-the-moment thinking. As participants become engaged in creating improvised rhythms, they gain a fresh perspective on teamwork, communication, and innovation that stays with them long after the drumming has ended. The experiential learning found in drum circles both builds participants' understanding of your organization's initiatives, and helps foster collaboration and healthy communication among your team members.

Drum Circles:

- Build community within your organization
- Inspire creative thought
- Foster teamwork
- Improve communication and listening skills
- Encourage flexibility and willingness to adapt
- Promote leadership skills
- Strengthen participants' bond as a group
- Provide a fun way to learn, grow, and relieve stress!
